READ! REFLECT!Then Act

Last week we advertised rebuilt pianos that we had taken in exchange for new pianos and player pianos at bargain prices. We expected an immediate response, but were completely unprepared for the avalanche of buyers that swarmed in the store within the last few days looking for these bargains. Our stock of rebuilt pianos is rapidly being depleted, but on account of the fact that we were unable to accommodate so many prospective buyers, and also owing to the congested condition of our stock, we have decided (after mature deliberation) to let our entire stock go, including used pianos, discontinued styles, shop-worn goods, in fact, everything on our floors, at terms and prices absolutely unheard of and unapproached in the history of piano selling in this vicinity. We are grateful to the piano purchasing public of this city and vicinity for their instant and immediate response to our announcements of special sales in the last few days, and by way of showing our appreciation we have decided on this step and propose to give every prospective purchaser in this city an opportunity of buying a high-grade piano at an actual bona-fide saving. Don't let this opportunity go by! Don't wait! Don't hesitate! But DO IT NOW!

ANOTHER PEERESS OF AMERICAN BIRTH

Daughter of Ogden H. Burrows, of Newport, Is Wife of Lord Calthorpe.

BY LA MARQUESE DE FONTENAY.
TO the list of British peeresses of American birth must now be added the daughter of Ogden Hoffman Burrows, of Newport, R. I., who has hitherto been known as Miss Somerset Gough-Calthorpe and whose husband, formerly a captain of the Royal Fusilier Regiment, has just become Lord Calthorpe through the death of his father.

He will be able to take his seat at once in the House of Lords, being more fortunate in this respect than his father. For when the latter succeeded his elder brother in the barony, he had to wait the usual ten months before taking his place among the hereditary legislators. True, the brother was eighty-one years of age at his death and had at the time recently celebrated his golden wedding. But, although his widow was herself an octogenarian, neither the crown nor the upper chamber would take any chances, and it was not until a positive certainty had been acquired that this venerable lady would not give birth to a posthumous heir to the Barony of Calthorpe that her brother-in-law, the general, received a summons from the sovereign to take his elder brother's seat in the House of Lords.

The Barony of Calthorpe was originally created in favor of Sir Henry Gough, second baronet of his line, who on the death of his maternal uncle, Sir Henry Calthorpe, and on inheriting the latter's property, assumed, with permission of the crown, the name and arms of Calthorpe, in addition to his own. The Calthorpes hail from Norfolkshire, and Sir James Calthorpe, an ancestor of the new Lord Calthorpe, was knighted by Cromwell in 1636. With regard to the Goughs, they were originally merchants in London, and the founder of the house may be said to have been Sir Richard Gough, who acquired a great fortune in the India and China trade and was knighted by George I.

The principal country seat of the Lords Calthorpe, and to which the new peer now succeeds, is Elvetham Park, in Hampshire, where Edward VII. and likewise King George and Queen Mary, have on frequent occasions been visitors. Elvetham Park is celebrated for its golf links. Another country seat of Lord Calthorpe is Perry Hall, near Birmingham, which has been in the Gough family for 200 years, one of its most distinguished owners and occupants having been Richard Gough, the famous antiquary of the early Georgian era, who on dying bequeathed his magnificent library and priceless manuscripts of the early Saxon era to the University of Oxford. The property which now comes into the possession of Lord Calthorpe is very valuable and extensive, comprising a considerable amount of real estate in the Clerkenwell district of London and several thousands of acres in the Edgbaston suburb of Birmingham, from which large rentals are derived.

The Lords Calthorpe have been the principal benefactors of the Birmingham University, which owes to their generosity the large gift of twenty-five acres for its scientific department, and a much larger tract of land, now used as a recreation ground. It was the fifth Lord Calthorpe, an uncle of the present peer, who was so celebrated as a sportsman, winning a number of classic events, including the Oaks and the St. Leger, though never the Derby. He was not only a sportsman, but also a great philanthropist and although he died as a Peasant, was one of the most intimate friends of Cardinal Newman.

success Lord Chelmsford as Governor of New South Wales, at a salary of $15,000 a year and an official residence at Sydney, has hitherto been representing his sovereign in Tasmania. Married to Lady Edeline Sackville, sister of the Earl de la Warr, he has, in addition to the English title which he owns through his knight commandment of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, the Maltese dignity of Count della Catena, which he inherited from his maternal grand-uncle, which he bears with the sanction of the English crown, and which was created in 1745 by the Grand Master of the Sovereign Order of the Knights of Malta, in favor of Peter Bologna, with succession to the heir under perpetual entail to whom the estates of Peter Bologna,

Hamilton Watch History

The first Hamilton Timekeeper was begun in the early spring of the year 1892, and completed late in the fall of the same year. The fourth Hamilton Timekeeper to be made was purchased by Mr. Edwin Paul, a conductor on the Pennsylvania railroad, and if you were to ride from Philadelphia to Harrisburg, Pa., to-day on Mr. Paul's train you would be running on the time of that same Hamilton Timekeeper.

The Hamilton Timekeeper was originally a railroad watch made for the use of railroad men.

Now, every business man who appreciates an absolutely accurate timekeeper may have a on the island of Malta, should descend. These estates, including the beautiful Villa Bologna at Malta, now belong to Sir Gerald.

He is a member of the English bar, received his education at Oriel, the great Catholic school in England, and went from there to Cambridge, where he succeeded in achieving the presidency of the Cambridge Union. He is a thorough sportsman, has ridden the winner of the Grand National and did so well as chief secretary to the government of Malta that he was promoted to the governorship of Tasmania, from which he has now been transferred to New South Wales. Through his father, the late Captain Walter Strickland of the royal navy, he has inherited Sizergh Castle, in Westminster, which came to the Stricklands through the marriage of Sir Robert Strickland to the heiress of Sir Ralph Delacourt, in the reign of Henry III.

The family is one of the most ancient in England, and has for near a thousand years borne as its crest a bird which is described in old heraldic phraseology as "a turkey-cock in its pride." It was settled in Westminster long before the Norman Conquest. A son of the house, William Strickland, accompanied Sebastian Cabot on his voyages of discovery to the New World, and on his becoming too old for a life of adventure, settled down at Sizergh Hall, which has been in the possession of the family ever since, and is now owned by Sir Walter Strickland, ninth baronet of his line and head of his house. His father, the late baronet, figures in "Tom Brown's School Days" as Martin, the principal chum of the hero of the story. He was a wonderful old character and spent his ninetieth birthday in the hunting field, following the hounds over hedges and ditches, ultimately succumbing to an attack of influenza, which he declared to be the first illness of his life. A Tory of the ancient school, he entertained the most profound contempt for present day politics, a contempt so pronounced that he would not even go to the polls, and when a Conservative agent wrote to him asking for his vote, he replied in a letter, which was given out for publication, to the effect: "I do not know who has been so impertinent as to put my name to any list of voters. I only hope that no one will ever imagine that the miserable and degraded brute which has come to be a deliberative assembly and in which no one can honestly express his opinion without being in danger of the gag, in any way represents me."

A Sir Thomas Strickland bore the banner of St. George at the battle of Agincourt. A Walter Strickland enjoyed the favor of Oliver Cromwell, who summoned him to the "other House of Parliament" as Lord Strickland. Miss Agnes Strickland, the historian and author of "The Lives of Queens of England" and "The Lives of Queens of Scotland," was a member of this family.

Some ignorance seems to prevail as to what is meant by the "Panthron" at Madrid, in which the murdered Prime Minister Canalejas has been entombed. It is the Church of San Francisco at Granada, and the present edifice dates from 1734. It is built on the site of a former church erected by St.

Francis himself in the early part of the thirteenth century. In 1857, the Cortes decreed that the church should be known as the National Pantheon, and that the remains of all the most distinguished Spaniards should be buried there. But no attempt to enforce the law was made until 1869. Since Alfonso XIII. has been on the throne a considerable amount of money has been spent by the state in restoring the church, and it now contains some magnificent statuary and paintings. Among those who lie there are General Prim, the one time Dictator of Spain, whose assassination in 1870 remains an unraveled mystery to this day.
